Columbus AFB was chosen to be one of the locations for the Uzbekistan troops to visit not only because of our pilot training program but because Mississippi is Uzbekistan's National Guard State Partnership Programs partner country.

"They came to Columbus Air Force Base specifically because they want to be able to produce their pilots, as well as Mississippi is the guard partner state for Uzbekistan," said Capt. John McDaniel, 14th OG Commander's Action Group. "So they are also visiting an Army National Guard base to see their helicopters and a Jackson Air National Guard base to see their C-17s."

Their visit included most aspects Columbus AFB has that directly contribute to producing pilots, including the tower and Radar Approach Control, aerospace physiology and the flying squadrons. "Tours like this are important because

14th Force Support Squadron

As the resources continue to shrink for support services in the military, the breadth of programs many seasoned military families grew up accustomed to having on military bases will not be the norm – particularly at smaller bases like Columbus AFB.

Our limited resources will increasingly need to focus on a smaller number of highuse, high-impact service activities. Receiving feedback is critical as we make important decisions on what services to keep, which ones we can do without, and which ones we can improve.

The Interactive Customer Evaluation, or ICE, system allows you the means to give that essential feedback. The original program was created in 1998 to provide a more effective and timely way of providing improvement efforts rather than just through annual assessment surveys. A redesign of the ICE program in 2001 was extended globally and Columbus AFB began using it in 2006.

The Force Support Squadron has been ley from the 14th Student Squadron, who the predominant user of the program since was February's ICE Comment submission its inception, but with the new Web site, winner! www.columbusafbliving.com, comment In addition to the ICE Comment Icon lines to ALL the services on Base are now & links available on the website, many faavailable. Poe named RAO director for Columbus AFB

Maj. Stephen Duran 14th Mission Support Group Commander's Action Group

James Poe has been selected to assist Columbus Air Force Base with building and maintaining a closer working relationship with its important retiree community.

The announcement was made official at a recent Mission Support Group staff meeting.

Col. Kurt Kayser, 14th MSG Commander, said he was excited about what the new appointment would mean for the

"This is a very critical position for the base, one we are delighted to have filled," Kayser said. "We are very excited about what can be accomplished working hand-in-hand with our retirees and their families."

The Retiree Activities Office Director is a volunteer position which has been vacant for a few years.

Poe, a retired Airman, was assigned to Columbus AFB as an active-duty Air Traffic Controller and First Sergeant for nine years. He retired in the Columbus area specifically for lumbus@us.af.mil. Also, check out http://www.columbusafthe base.

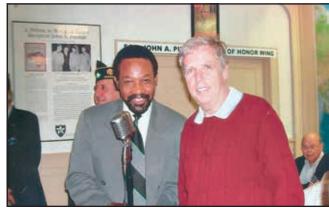

"I decided to retire here years ago when I left Richards-Gebaur AFB in Kansas City before it closed," Poe said. "I'm a Mississippi native, so when I got assigned here, I knew then that I would retire here. Contrary to what some may say about Mississippi, it is a great place to work, live, and raise a family. After all the base has done for me, volunteering for this position is the least I can do to give back."

Poe's job is to provide a conduit of information helpful to retirees and back to the base. Poe said it's a job he will take great pride in doing.

"Columbus Air Force Base does a great deal for not just our retiree community, but the community as a whole, pumping millions of dollars into the local economy," Poe said. "As a retiree in the area, I reap those benefits, so it gives me great pride to direct the Retiree Activities Office at Columbus Air Force Base."

Poe will staff the Retire Activities Office Monday and Tuesday initially between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Anyone requiring retiree assistance should call Poe at 434-3120/3121 or email the RAO office at 14FTW.RAO.cobliving.com and click on the retirement activities link under James Poe, Retiree Activities Office Director, interviews retired Gen. Robert H. "Doc" Fogelsong on Columbus Air Force Base, Mississippi, Poe will provide information and assistance to over 4,000 local retirees and to the base.

Family/Support. Poe is seeking more volunteers to help staff the office Monday-Friday. He is also soliciting retiree's for other base functions.

women might not be able to do," Olson said. "But technically or academically, we are the same. The Air Force offers everyone the same opportunities. That's the best part about being in the military - no one has to worry about whether or not a woman will be able to accomplish a task.'

Individuals like Col. Linda McTague, the first female fighter squadron commander and the Honorable Sheila Widnall, the first appointed secretary of the Air Force, have led by example and proven women can perform in non-traditional jobs.

Technical careers, equal pay and voting rights were merely dreams for women in the past, but now those dreams are constitutional rights

"If you're a technical sergeant. you get paid as a technical sergeant. If you want to make chief master sergeant during your career, with hard work, you are eligible to make chief," Olson said.

According to the Air Force Personnel Center, more than 58,000 women serve in the U.S. Air Force. They have the opportunity to ensure the empowerment given to them is carried on to the next generation.

"In an ideal world, people wouldn't focus on our gender, rather how we can be better together,' Westfall said. "We go through the same training as men. If I'm wearing a duty badge on my uniform. you should know without hesitation that I belong. We are strong women who fought to be here and we aren't going anywhere."

AF leaders seek relief from sequestration-level funding

Staff Sgt. Torri Ingalsbe

Secretary of the Air Force Public Affairs Command Information

WASHINGTON - Secretary of the Air Force Deborah Lee James and Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Mark A. Welsh III discussed the damaging effects of sequestration with members of the House of Representatives Committee on Appropriations' Defense Subcommittee Feb. 27.

"Your Air Force is working hard to meet the combatant commanders' most urgent needs," James said. "But a budget trajectory that results in sequestration simply will not allow us to sustain this pace. We will either break or we won't be able to execute the Defense Strategic Guidance. We cannot do it."

Sequestration-level funding will force the service to divest fleets of aircraft, to include the KC-10 Extender. Total force flying hours will be cut, as well as weapons systems sustainment, ranges, simulators and high-end training exercises like Red and Green Flags.

To avoid some of these cuts, the Air Force has proposed a fiscal year 2016 budget that is about $10 billion more than current funding levels, which will allow the Air Force to meet combatant commander requirements while investing in the service's top priorities.

"Even if we get that (additional funding). it doesn't solve every ill," James said. "There's a lot of good in our budget, but there's also hard choices."

Some of those hard choices include divesting the A-10 Thunderbolt II fleet, slowing the growth of compensation and requesting another round of Defense Base Realignments and Closures.

"The most pressing issue of all (is) more than half of our combat Air Force is not sufficiently ready for a high-end fight," she said.

To balance the readiness of today with the modernization of tomorrow, the Air Force's proposed budget requests an increase in end strength to 492,000 active-duty, guard and reserve Airmen. The extra dollars will also be invested in mission-critical infrastructure; intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance; vital space programs; cyber teams; the nuclear enterprise; the KC-46 Pegasus, F-35 Lightning II and the Long-Range Strike isn't an option – it must be done, and he and the secretary asked Congress to help by lifting sequestration.

"Our short-term readiness recovery will stall; our long-term infrastructure investment will remain a dream; we'll be forced to recommend dramatic fleet reductions, and modernization will be further delayed, alclose that capability gap," he said. strain on the U.S. government, and has cost alleviate the strain.

"We get it in the United States Air Force The general explained modernization that we have to treat the American taxpayers' money as precious and we can't afford to waste a single dollar of it," James said. "We're working hard to make every dollar count."

The Air Force is driving steadily toward auditability, and it's taken a 20 percent reduction in funding at headquarters levels. The Airmen Powered by Innovation initiative has also turned up savings, and the Air lowing our adversaries to be able to further Force is still looking for the best ideas from Airmen who do the job every day.

"We understand that we must be part of

Both James and Welsh agree America's Airmen are what makes the Air Force what it is today, and they have been performing to the highest level, but they are being spread too thin. The operations tempo, coupled with decrease to critical infrastructure that gets Airmen and units combat ready, have taken their toll on Airmen and their fami-

Maj. Gen. Catton to speak at 15-06 graduation

14th Flying Training Wing Public Affairs

The 14th Flying Training Wing's "BLAZE" motto was coined in the fall of 1997 during a wing-wide contest by then wing commander Col. Jack Catton Jr., known affectionately now as "the father of BLAZE."

Now retired Maj. Gen. Catton, he is returning to Columbus AFB to be the graduation speaker for Specialized Undergraduate Pilot Training Class 15-06 March 13.

Catton was the Director of Requirements, Headquarters and General Staff Air Combat Command, Langley Air Force Base, Virginia. As director, he was responsible for all functions relating to the acquisition of weapons systems for combat air forces, to include new systems and modifications to existing systems.

The general graduated from the U.S. Air Force Academy in 1976. A graduate of the F-15 Fighter Weapons School, he has served operationally as an instructor pilot, wing weapons and tactics officer, operations officer, squadron commander and operations group commander. He commanded the 14th Flying Training Wing at Columbus AFB, Mississippi, and later commanded the 53rd Wing at Eglin AFB, Florida, where he was responsible for 1,800 military and civilian personnel at 18 U.S. locations, conducting operational testing and evaluation of all U.S. Air Force combat aircraft, tactics development, and evaluation of electronic combat, armament, avionics and aircrew training devices.

Catton's staff tours include an Air Staff tour as the Director of Operations advocate for the advanced tactical fighter; a NATO staff tour as Chief of Contingency Operations at NATO's Interim Deployable Combined Air Operations Center at Ramstein Air Base, Germany; and a major command staff tour as the Inspector General for Headquarters Pacific Air Forces at Hickam AFB, Hawaii. Prior to assuming his current position, he served on the Joint Staff as Deputy Director for Information Operations, and then as Director, Operational Plans and Joint Force Development, where he was responsible to the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff for all matters pertaining to transforming joint operational concepts, education, training, exercises and war plans.

Air Force women push boundaries, change history

2nd Lt. Matthew Malek 14th Student Sauadron

Once again, the President has declared the month of March "Women's History Month," an observance of the strides toward gender equality our nation has taken.

For those of us who serve, this observance comes at a poignant time.

At the end of this month, five women will participate in the first-ever co-ed Ranger School. These women have already made history by successfully completing Fort Benning's rigorous Ranger Training Assessment Course and are pushing against a Department of Defense prohibition on women in combat units.

In the military, women have a tradition of pushing the boundaries set for them. Deborah Sampson disguised herself as a man, fought, and sustained two wounds in the Revolutionary War for a country that did not allow women to vote. Many women followed suit during the all Civil War.

Dr. Mary Edwards Walker volunteered as a surgeon for tinue to establish higher standards. The Air Force is betthe Union Army and served through major battles. Con- ter for it, and our country is safer for it.

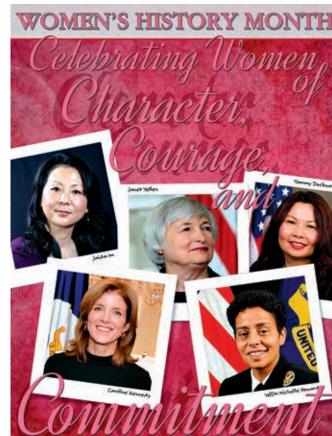

federate forces captured her and held her for months, and today she is still the only woman awarded the Medal of Honor.

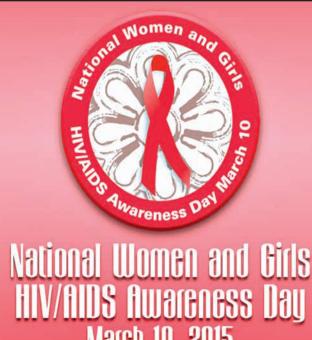

Women pushed for a professional nurse corps following the Spanish-American War. The formation of the Army and Navy Nurses Corps was timely in the lead-up to World War I.

On the first minute of the first hour of the first day the Air Force authorized women to serve, Staff Sgt. Esther Blake enlisted. In spite of having a son shot down in a B-17 during World War II, Blake wanted to serve in the hope of freeing an Airman from clerical work to fight, a tradition women have continued and expanded.

There are too many incredible women in military service to name for this article to do any of them justice. However, the women mentioned above highlight that women in uniform push boundaries. More pertinently, by pushing boundaries, women in the Air Force push us

Women's History Month: Remembering the past, looking toward the future

Senior Airman Matthew Lotz

AVIANO AIR BASE, Italy — During the early 1900s, answering phone calls, maintaining records and providing minor health care were some of few roles women who served in the military were permitted to fill. Jobs left open because men left for war, gave women the opportunity to step up and volunteer on the home front.

A century later, women across the Department of Defense carry responsibilities from maintaining multi-million-dollar aircraft, leading troops through battlefields and serving in higher leadership positions.

More items added to Commissary Value Brand

Richard Brink Defense Commissary Agency

With nearly 100 items recently added to the Commissary Value Brand program, military patrons will have even more opportunities to save, said Chief Master Sgt. Stuart Allison, the Defense Commissary Agency's senior enlisted advisor to the director.

"We recommend that patrons continue to monitor the orange 'Value' signs in the stores because they will see a larger offering of products," Allison said.

Since the middle of February, new products added to the program include several cheeses, condiments, canned and powdered milk, canned soup, dry pasta, honey, rice, laundry bleach and paper towels.

With the influx of new items, the Value Brand mix will boast nearly 400 products such as frozen vegetables, pizza and entrees; pet foods; health and beauty care; cereals; cleaning supplies; soft drinks; coffee; canned fruit, soup and fish; disposable lunch and storage bags; condiments and more.

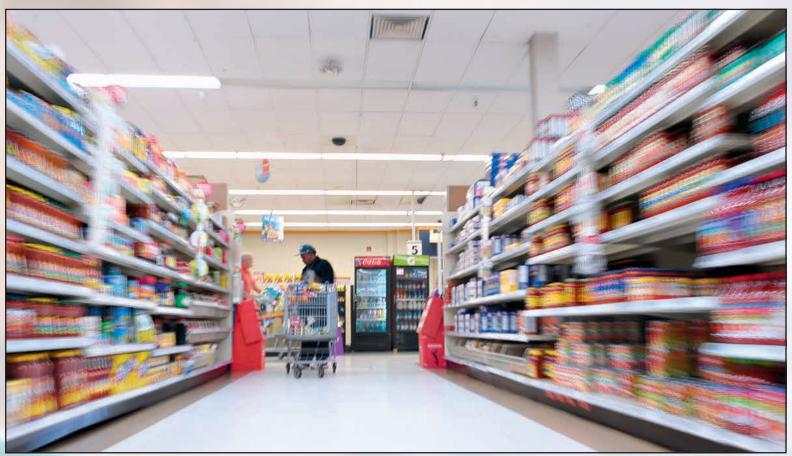

The average savings for Value Brand is about 42 percent when compared to national brands and 25 percent against the store brand and private label items found in commercial retail stores. Patrons looking for these items will see orange "Value" tags. A list of items, FAQs and a video of the program are available at http://www.commissaries.com/shopping/ value-brand.cfm.
