JOINT BASE SAN ANTONIO-RANDOLPH, Texas Wing commanders from across the Air Education and Training Command welcomed the new 19th Air Force commander during a change of command ceremony here March 28.

Brig. Gen. Patrick J. Doherty received the guidon for 19th Air Force from Maj. Gen. James B. Hecker as Lt. Gen. Darryl L. Roberson, AETC commander presided. Friends, family, and many Airmen from across the command were in attendance.

"We're going to look at innovation, at all the ideas that are out there," Doherty said. "We'll bring creative ideas forward to make better aviators and operators in the future. We need to recognize and prioritize our people. People come first. They are our number one weapons system."

Doherty's previous assignment was as the 82nd Training Wing commander, at Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas, before coming to JBSA-Randolph. He has flown the F-15 Strike Eagle, T-38 Talon, and the B-52 Stratofortress, compiling more than 3,800 pilot hours. He was commissioned through the Air Force ROTC program at Iowa State University in 1987.

Members of the 19th Air Force are responsible for training aircrews, air battle managers and weapons directors, plus Air Force Academy Airmanship programs, and survival, escape, resistance, and evasion.

Headquartered at JBSA-Randolph, 19th AF spans and includes 19 training locations, Oct. 1, 2014.

with 16 total force wings: 10 active duty, one Air Force Reserve, and five Air National Guard units. The organization includes more than 30,000 personnel who operate more than 1,350 aircraft from 29 different aircraft models.

"He went on to successfully command at every level of command available to him in the Air Force while still finding a unique way to care for every Airman and to leave a long-lasting positive impact on their lives and families," Roberson said about Doherty. "I'm going to ask you to keep the throttles pushed forward as you lead the mighty men and women of the 19th Air Force. We are your wingmen. Airpower starts here!"

Happy Irby legacy charity continues to thrive

Sonic Johnson 14th Flying Training Wing Public Affairs

Local community members and Columbus Air Force Base Airmen came together for the Happy Irby Christmas Fund Golf Tournament March 24, 2017, at the soon-toclose Whispering Pines base golf course.

Twenty six foursomes showed up to play in this year's tournament.

With the near-record turnout of 104 golfers, the 1 p.m. shot-gun start was expanded by golf course officials to add an additional 9 a.m. tee time. Seven teams golfed the earlier tee time and finished in time to join the afternoon golfers in the club house for lunch.

The Happy Irby Christmas Fund is a thriving private organization that benefits thousands of adults and children alike. Last year, the fund provided clothing and supplies to over 450 children in the local schools and community. In addition, the Happy Irby Fund delivered over 120 fruit baskets to shut-ins and elderly who would otherwise be alone.

In 1996 the Happy Fund became part of the Combined Federal Campaign with 100 percent of donations collected used to provide gifts. Local fund raisers such as the CAFB Annual Happy Fund Golf Tournament and private donations are accepted throughout the year to keep Happy Irby's dream alive.

The 2017 Happy golf tournament received $7,000 in tournament and hole sponsors and $3,400 in golfer registration generating nearly $11,000 for the charity.

Whispering Pines is scheduled to close at the end of April this year, which may have contributed to the record turnout this year. The Happy Christmas Fund Golf Tournament has been played on Columbus AFB for over 20 years and was initially played in October. After Happy Irby's death in 2009, the tournament moved to the spring and is anchored around Happy's birthdate of March 27, beginning with the 2010 tournament.

The golfers from the 43rd Flying Training Squadron led by Lt. Col. Tom McElhinney were the tournament winners with a score of 29 strokes for the 9-hole tournament. Lt. Col. Steve Cochran, Maj. Luke for a good cause and a little compet-Borer and Capt. Christopher Rob-

Aside from utilizing various tools, equipment and vehicles to complete their training, EOD technicians were able to practice using live explosives thanks to a brand new EOD range, which saw its first use on Feb. 10, 2017. During Vigilant Walrus, EOD technicians utilized the new range as a staging point for scenarios, as well as a location for disposing munitions and explosives.

"The range allows us to train with almost all of our explosives and explosive tools in a safe and controlled environment," said Staff Sgt. Daniel Metts, an EOD technician with the 379th ECES. "The range allows us to continue to strengthen our technical skills by utilizing our demolition explosives, and also acts as an emergency disposal location in the event of any improvised explosive ordnance or damaged munitions identified by munitions personnel." SOUTHWEST ASIA — With a packed room of not just people, but also emotion Staff Sgt. Alexandria Morrow was remembered by colleagues and friends March 23, 2017, during her memorial service at her deployed location.

Members of her deployed unit, 332nd Expeditionary Maintenance Squadron, shared stories and memories that painted a picture of a weapons load crew chief who touched the lives of many.

"We mourn for Alexandria Mae Morrow because she was one of the kindest people many of us have ever known," said Lt. Col. Paul Tower, the 332nd EMXS commander. "She was a loving wife to her husband, an amazing mother to her children, and our fellow warrior and friend-a friend who could be trusted in the toughest of times."

Morrow's caring ways earned her the nickname 'Mother Alex' not only amongst her immediate teammates, but from those she encountered on the flightline and also worked with at her home station of Mountain Home Air Force Base, Idaho.

Master Sgt. Jeffrey Passut, the 332nd EMXS weapons section chief, deployed with Morrow from Mountain Home and shared that not only was she an amazing person, she was also an amazing Airman He listed her many accomplishments and how if someone wanted something done right they knew Morrow was the person for the job.

"She rolled into the weapons section office at Mountain Home AFB on a Wednesday in early 2010 and said, 'Hi, I'm Airman Gleason, what do I need to do?" Passut said. "Her potential progressed and as she became a Senior Airman we had a need for team chiefs. Due to her dedication and drive she ended up becoming the first Senior Airman team chief in 389th Aircraft Maintenance Unit history. Although, that is an NCO job, she was our first pick to lead that crew.'

At her deployed location, this 7-year veteran was known as a professional that was not only proficient at her job, but also passionate about it. So much so that when the commander for United States Central Command came for a visit, she was selected to brief him on weapons loading operations. ment.

Morrow died from injuries sustained while performing work duties in support of Operation Inherent Resolve.

From briefing the CENTCOM commander, to everything else she set out to do, her passion and her love was infectious and evident by those who came in contact with

"How do we measure the impact someone's love has on others?" said Capt. Wesley Sheppard, the expeditionary aircraft maintenance unit officer in charge. "I realized the best measure was in the amount of love our team felt for her. We can see how much she loved others by the emotions, the looks on everyone's faces as we processed that we lost the mom of the flightline. We could see it by the tears that rolled down our faces and by the tight hugs we gave each other."

Sheppard went on to explain, "She loved so much that she sacrificed her life defending our country and millions of people, including the defenseless in Iraq and Syria. She died protecting innocent women, children, the old and young, and people of every race and religion...If that's not love I don't know what is."

'Mother Alex's' memorial service was testament to that love as well as a variety of other emotions, and in addition to evoking emotion, it was about honor and commit-

Col. Clinton Eichelberger, the 332nd AEW commander, helped put who Morrow was into perspective, and also put into perspective her legacy and contributions as he spoke to an audience of her wing teammates

"Service for Staff Sgt. Morrow was unquestionable," Eichelberger said. "What she led every day is now going down in history books. What you do every day is going down in history books."

His words seemed to resonate through room packed full of service members who are making a difference daily and helping defeat terrorists, like ISIS, who mean the world harm.

"Everybody here is fighting because the freedoms we have and the values we are promoting are not free," he said. "Everybody here is sacrificing, your families back home are sacrificing, and every once in a while we have a sacrifice that goes above and beyond. These are the moments that we cannot forget because the sacrifice of Sergeant Morrow, the sacrifice of bringing these freedoms and values to our families back home, is one thing I will never forget."

"Let us always remember what Sergeant Morrow stood for."

AF leaders: Total force essential to readiness

Tech. Sgt. Robert Barnett

Secretary of the Air ForcePublic Affairs

WASHINGTON — Air Force senior leaders testified on the current state of the total force readiness before the House Armed Services Committee in Washington, D.C., March 22, Lt. Gen. L. Scott Rice, the director of Air National Guard. Lt. Gen. Maryanne Miller, the chief of Air Force Reserve and commander of Air Force Reserve Command and Maj. Gen. Scott West, the director of Air Force Current Operations and deputy chief of staff for Operations, shared Air Force needs before the readiness subcommittee.

"Readiness is my first priority," Rice said.

Readiness is measured in two ways: 'for what' and 'with what,' West said. 'For what' is the commander's assessment of whether their unit is ready to support their mission. 'With what' measures personnel, training, skill level, equipment and resources.

"I think the combination of the two of them is important," West said. "Those two together inform how we measure read iness. Accessing and retaining more Airmen is the first step towards improvement.'

Readiness levels are lowered by the shortage of experi enced maintainers to generate sorties and enable full spectrum training with aging fleets. Modernization and recapitalization of aircraft and equipment are also essential, all three Air Force leaders said.

The average age of Air Force aircraft is 27 years – older day and the time of our choosing. than many of the pilots flying them.

Lt. Gen. Maryanne Miller, the chief of Air Force Reserve and commander of Air Force Reserve Command, discusses her top priorities for the Air Force Reserve during a House Armed Services Committee hearing on Capitol Hill, March 22, 2017. During the event, Miller, alongside leaders from the active Air Force and Air National Guard, discussed issues facing the Air Force with members of Congress.

"It's more difficult to make (our aircraft) available for training, which affects our readiness," West said. "It's important that the Air Force be able to generate the sorties when we want to, to be able to have the effect we want to have on the alignment and Closure be initiated by Congress," West said.

The panel also agreed on the need for more maintainers, and to fix the pilot shortage.

"If there's one thing I could do, it would be put more maintainers on the flight lines," Rice said.

Based on the service's current assessments, more manpower is also needed in maintenance, intelligence -specifically intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance - cyber, pilots and special operations.

"To begin to improve readiness now, and attain manning levels that match requirements, the Air Force must increase its active duty, Guard and Reserve end strength, to include growing active duty end strength to 350,000," West said.

While all three expressed the need for more Airmen, they also expressed the need to reduce infrastructure.

Far too much money is spent on excess infrastructure than needed given today's reduced manpower footprint and current warfighting mission requirements. Excess and outdated facilities need to be reduced, according to Air Force leader-

Since 2005, the Air Force retired eight minor installations, approximately 500 aircraft and reduced its total active duty military manpower approximately 8 percent without reducing its installation infrastructure at the same time. Given the current end-strength goal of 350,000, the estimate of excess Air Force infrastructure capacity would be approximately 24 percent, which is why the Air Force must also reduce outdated and unnecessary facilities.

AL UDEID AIR BASE, QATAR — Most of the crew is asleep, but for a few members. Outside, the sun is peaking over the horizon, sending long shadows across the terrain and buildings. Suddenly a loud banging from the door echoes through the hallway, breaking the silence and waking up the crew. The banging continues, and an Airman opens the door to discover a panic-stricken Airman holding onto her uniform blouse, wires protruding from various pockets and a loud ticking noise coming from her back. Immediately the Airman who opened the door recognizes the threat: a hostage outfitted with a bomb vest.

This is one scenario that members of the 379th Expeditionary Civil Engineer Squadron Explosive Ordnance Disposal Flight faced during exercise "Vigilant Walrus," a four-day exercise that consisted of various scenarios that tested EOD members' skill, knowledge and endurance.

The training was conducted to help provide EOD technicians with the threat analysis and critical thinking skills required in order to safely and effectively handle any threats they may face, particularly if they forward deploy. Aside from the mental training aspect, the exercise also forced Airmen to operate and work with limited resources and limited rest, mirroring situations experienced in a forward-deployed environment.

"The exercises that we throw at our teams are derived from intelligence reports from EOD teams in the field," said Capt. Daniel Blomberg, the 379th ECES EOD Flight commander. "They are compounded problems that we have to combat with limited personnel and limited resources.'

The EOD technicians were forced to work out of mine resistant ambush protected all-terrain vehicles and use limited gear, with little support from other agencies during the exercise. During night operations, crews were not allowed to use white light, making the scenarios more challenging and realistic.

"The scenarios involved a breach in the perimeter, and when that happens and you have white light, you become a target," Blomberg said. "Not using white light forces the team to learn to operate using night vision goggles and in vehicles that are equipped to help them see at night, and makes a scenario completely different than

Commissaries highlight month of military child with savings

Sallie Cauthers DeCA marketing and mass media specialist

FORT LEE, Va. - Commissaries are observing April, the Month of the Military Child, with giveaways and savings for the entire family.

"At the Defense Commissary Agency, we do all we can to provide our military children and their families with significant savings on groceries and household items," said Tracie Russ, DeCA's sales director. "With events such as ProCamps and our '5-2-1-0' nutritional message, we recognize the unique challenges our youth experience because of the demands of military life."

DeCA's industry partners - vendors, suppliers and brokers - are collaborating with commissaries in April to offer discounts beyond everyday savings. Overseas stores may have substitute events for certain promotional programs. Also, shoppers can find even more deals on DeCA's website, www.commissaries.com, along with the commissary sales flyer, which features discounted items and healthy recipe ideas.

Patrons can also access the DeCA website for the following features: 1) the Commissary Rewards Card which allows patrons to redeem coupons electronicaly at the commissary checkout. Patrons can pick up a card at their local commissary and register it at https:// commissaries.com/rewards/index.cfm, where they can log into their account to load coupons on the card before they shop; and 2) DeCA's new Nutritional Guide Program; go to www.commissaries.com/healthy-living/ nutrition-guide.cfm to learn more about the color-coded shelf labels that point out items with key nutrient attributes such as low sodium, whole grain, no sugar added, low fat, good source of fiber and organic.

Customers are asked to check their local commis sary for details on dates and times for the following promotions:

• Commissaries worldwide will use the Month of the Military Child to educate shoppers to encourage their children about healthier lifestyles. The "5-2-1-0" message remains the call to action: Eat five fruits and vegetables every day; limit recreational screen time to two hours or less daily; get one hour or more of physical activity every day and avoid all drinks with sugar. Your local commissary may have commissary tours highlighting the nutritional value of fresh fruits and vegetables along with recipes, food sampling and giveaways. Check with your local commissary to find out when your child's event takes place.

• Many camps, 30-day dash, three ways to win Through April 15, almost 100 commissaries worldwide will have a chance to win a football ProCamp for their installation. Winning stateside installations will host a free, two-day football camp for military children, both boys and girls, in first through eighth grade. At these camps, participants will learn from and play with some of their favorite NFL players like Alejandro Villanueva (Pittsburgh Steelers), Andre Roberts (Atlanta Falcons), Jonathan Stewart (Carolina Panthers), Steve Smith, Sr. (formerly of the Baltimore Ravens), Graham Gano (Carolina Panthers), LeGarrette Blount (New England Patriots), among many others. Installation consideration to qualify for a camp is based on their commissary sales of select items such as Tide, Pampers, Bounty, Charmin, Head & Shoulders, Pantene, Crest and Gillette. Customers can vote for their installation at www.StartStrongPG.com or text their base name to 1-855-980-1999. Standard messaging and data rates apply. Not all carriers support this service.

• Kraft Heinz Company is offering shoppers a chance to win an all-expense paid trip to the NHL Award Ceremony in June 2017 held in Las Vegas, Nevada. Instore displays will announce the NHL "online" sweepstakes as well as offer great recipes. There will also be coupons available for $5 off 5 items on brands such as Oscar Mayer, Kraft, Velveeta and Planters from April 1-23 at all stores.

• Keebler's Annual Hollow Tree promotion features savings on discounted Keebler products April 10-23 at all stores. Customers can get a coupon for free milk with the purchase of four packages of Keebler cookies or Keebler Rite Bite packages. Free cookies and milk samples will be offered at most stores. Look for Ernie and the Keebler elves on Keebler snacks displays.

• Kashi Plus Fresh Pears! Kashi is offering coupon flyers worldwide so can buy two Kashi products and save $2 on fresh pears. Also, recipes will be available

BLAZE Hangar Tails: B-2 Spirit

Mission

The B-2 Spirit is a multi-role bomber capable of delivering both conventional and nuclear munitions. A dramatic leap forward in technology, the bomber represents a major milestone in the U.S. bomber modernization program. The B-2 brings massive firepower to bear, in a short time, anywhere on the globe through previously impenetrable defenses.

Features

The B-2 provides the penetrating flexibility and effectiveness inherent in manned bombers. Its low-observable, or "stealth," characteristics give it the unique ability to penetrate an enemy's most sophisticated defenses and threaten its most valued, and heavily defended, targets. Its capability to penetrate air defenses and threaten effective retaliation provides a strong, effective deterrent and combat force well into the 21st century.

The revolutionary blending of low-observable technologies with high aerodynamic efficiency and large payload gives the B-2 important advantages over existing bombers. Its low-observability provides it greater freedom of action at high altitudes, thus increasing its range and a better field of view for the aircraft's sensors. Its unrefueled range is approximately 6,000 nautical miles (9,600 kilometers).

The B-2 has a crew of two pilots, a pilot in the left seat and mission commander in the right, compared to the B-1B's crew of four and the B-52's crew of five.

Col. John Nichols, former 14th Flying Training Wing Commander, has been selected for promotion to brigadier general and will go on to command the 509th Bomb Wing at Whiteman Air Force Base, Montana. Congratulations!

Background

The first B-2 was publicly displayed on Nov. 22, 1988, when it was rolled out of its hangar at Air Force Plant 42, Palmdale, California. Its first flight was July 17, 1989. The B-2 Combined Test Force, Air Force Flight Test Center, Edwards Air Force Base, California, is responsible for flight testing the engineering, manufacturing and development aircraft on the B-2.

The combat effectiveness of the B-2 was proved in Operation Allied Force, where it was responsible for destroying 33 percent of all Serbian targets in the first eight weeks, by flying nonstop to Kosovo from its home base in Missouri and back. In support of Operation Enduring Freedom, the B-2 flew one of its longest missions to date from Whiteman to Afghanistan and back. The B-2 completed its first-ever combat deployment in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom, flying 22 sorties from a forward operating location as well as 27 sorties from Whiteman AFB and releasing more than 1.5 million pounds of munitions. The aircraft received full operational capability status in December 2003. On Feb. 1, 2009, the Air Force's newest command, Air Force Global Strike Command, assumed responsi-

• Overseas Service Corporation and their partners present the "Fisher House Theme Event," a stateside-only sale to raise awareness and money for The Fisher House Organization. The Fisher House is a "home away from home" for families of patients receiving medical care at major military and Veterans Affairs medical centers. Look for special prices and coupons supported by a coupon flyer and mass displays in all stateside stores from participating manufacturers.

• The Clorox Company and Bush's Best are teaming up with Kimberly Clark to host the 10th annual "Race for Savings" NASCAR-themed in-store sales event from April 10-23 stateside only. Patrons at participating stores can enter to win a NASCAR Memorial Day Race Package in Charlotte, North Carolina. Two grand prize race packages will be given away nationally. Each prize package includes airfare for two, hotel, race tickets for the Nextel Cup race as well as a $300 VISA cash card for meals and incidentals. Check out special NASCAR/JTG Daugherty Racing displays in the commissaries for details on how to enter.

"As we honor our military children, don't miss out on these opportunities to save even more," Russ said. "For everyone in the family, the commissary is always worth the trip."

About DeCA: The Defense Commissary Agency operates worldwide chain of commissaries providing groceries to miltary personnel, retirees and their families in a safe and secure hopping environment. Commissaries provide a military benefit and make no profit on the sale of merchandise. Authorized patrons save thousands of dollars annually on their purchases compared to commercial prices when shopping regularly at a commissary. The discounted prices include a 5-percent surcharge, which covers the costs of building new commissaries and modernizing existing ones. A core military family support element, and a valued part of military pay and benefits, commissaries contribute to family readiness, enhance the quality of life for America's military and their families, and help recruit and retain the best and brightest men and women to serve their country.
